About the event
Future belongs to the youth – but do they want it?

It's almost a platitude that the youth is not interested in politics, and they are nearly impossible to engage; however, the student protests of the recent years, as well as the growth of student organisations and their increasing public activity seems to contradict that statement. Republikon Institute's conference on youth will be focusing on young people's participation in politics, and on their assessment of this year's European Parliament elections.

Programme

10:00 Republikon welcome: Gabor Horn, President of the Republikon Foundation
ELF welcome: Milosz Hodun, Board Member of ELF

10:10 In our event's international panel the representatives of the Italian, Polish and Hungarian organisations that carried out the research will introduce the results from their respective countries, and will analyse and discuss the data within the framework of a roundtable-discussion. Speakers: Zoltan Ranschburg (Republikon Fondation, Hu), Milosz Hodun (Projekt: Polska!, Po), Antonio Casella (RIDE, It)

11:30 – 12:00 Coffee break

12:00 – 13.30 Hungarian panel with Hungarian experts of youth research and the representatives of politically active youth organisations will discuss the political participation of young Hungarians. Speakers: Lili Aschenbrenner (Fridays for Future), Georgina Kiss-Kozma (MCC), Ádám Nagy (Youth Researcher), Andrea Szabó (Research Centre for Social Sciences)

14:00 End of the event
