

The support for the Fudan University's Campus in Budapest

A REPUBLIKON INSTITUTE ANALYSIS

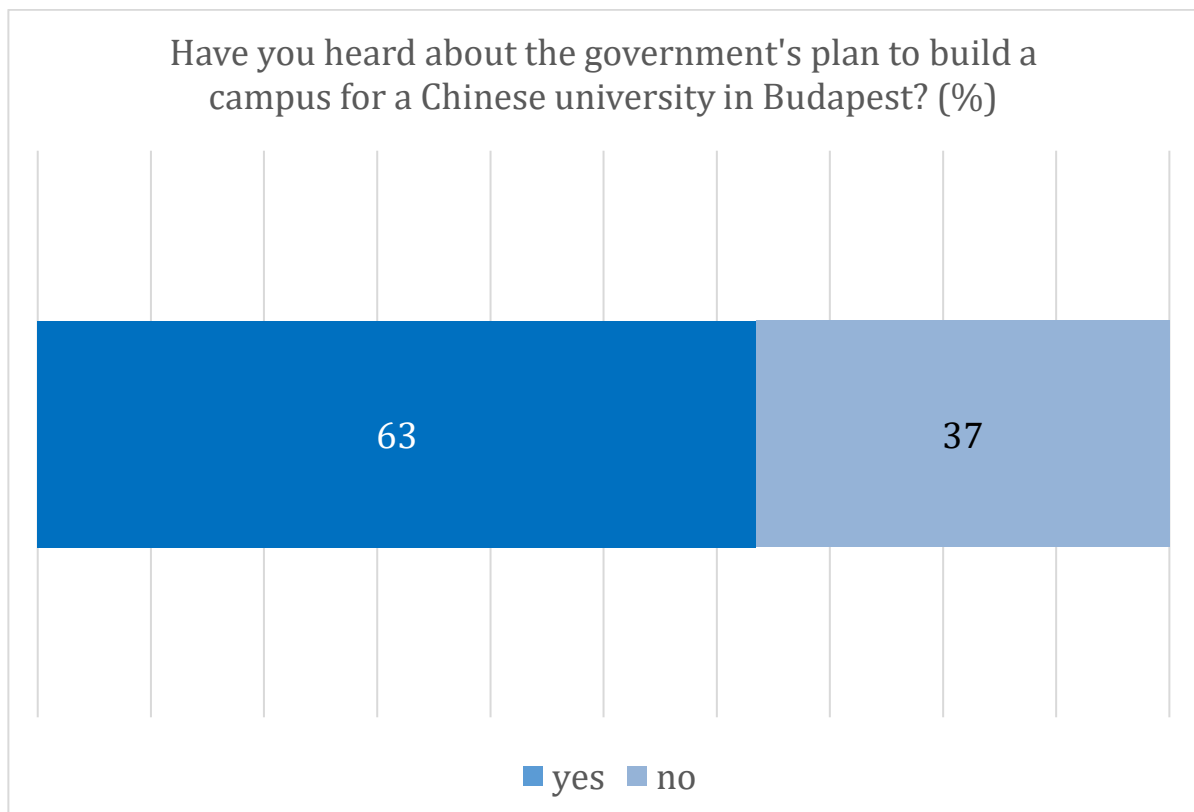

2021. MAY

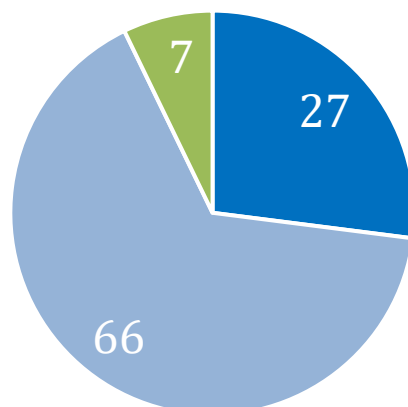

SUMMARY

The voters do not support the building of the Fudan University campus in Budapest – as found in the Republikon Foundation’s newest study. The plans about the Fudan University were known by most who were asked, which shows the importance of the issue in today’s political climate. Two-thirds of the voters are against the government’s plan. By studying the issue from the perspective of political preference, it is found that even among pro-government voters one-third is against it. And in the rest of the social groups the opposition against the project is clear.
